

Marie McMahon

Dr. Mary McMahon is a Senior Lecturer in the School of Education at The University of Queensland, Australia. She teaches career theory, career guidance and counselling, narrative career counselling and supervision.

Her research and publications focus on the career development of children and adolescents, narrative career counselling and qualitative career assessment.

Mary is known for her application of systems theory to career development. She has published extensively internationally.